Ode to Multiauthorship: A Multicentre, Prospective Random Poem

Sir—All cases complete, the study was over the data were entered, lost once, and recovered.

Results were greeted with considerable glee p value (two-tailed) equaling 0.0493.
The severity of illness, oh what a discovery, was inversely proportional to the chance of recovery.

When the paper's first draft had only begun the wannabe authors lined up one by one.

To jockey for their eternal positions (for who would be first, second, and third) and whom "et al." in all further citations.

Each centre had seniors, each senior ten bees,

the bees had technicians and nurses to please.
The list grew longer and longer each day, as new authors appeared to enter the fray.

With such fury to stake his or her place
just a "participant" would be a disgrace.

For the appendix is piled high with hundreds of others and seen by no one but spouses and mothers.

If to "publish or perish" is how academics are bred then to miss the masthead is near to be dead.

As the number of authors continued to grow they outnumbered the patients by two to one or so.

While PIs faxed memos to company headquaters the bees and the nurses took care of the orders.

They'd signed up the patients, and followed them weekly
heard their complaints, and kept casebooks so neatly.

There were seniors from centres that enrolled two or three who threatened "foul play" if not on the marquee.

But the juniors and helpers who worked into the night

were simply "acknowledged" or left off outright.

"Calm down" cried the seniors to the quivering drones there's place for you all on the RPU clones.

When the paper was finished and sent for review six authors didn't know that the study was through.

Oh the work was so hard, and the fights oh so bitter for the glory of publishing and grabbing the glitter.

Imagine the wars when in six months or better
The Editor's response, "please make it a letter."

The order of the authors is not necessarily related to specific contributions, but to the order in which each made their acquaintance with the first author. However, all have made significant contributions to the poem. The authors acknowledge their debt to Theodore Geisel. This letter was originally submitted to The Lancet as an article.

RPU = repeating publishable unit; PI = principal investigator

Harold W Horowitz¹, Nicholas H Fiebach¹, Stuart M Levitz¹, Jo Seibel¹, Edwin H Small¹, Edward E Teitz¹, Gary P Wormser¹, Robert B Nadelman¹, Marisa Montecalvo¹, John Nowakowski¹, and John Raffalli¹

¹New York Medical College ²Yale University School of Medicine ³Boston University School of Medicine ⁴MetroWest Medical Center
⁵Albert Einstein School of Medicine

©The Lancet, Volume 348, page 1746, 21/28

DEPARTMENT OF
PONDEROUS PROSE

Can you translate the passage below into simple English?

Even with the most sophisticated experimental protocol, it is exceedingly unlikely that the capacity to perform novel feats of legerdemain can be instilled in a superannuated canine.

(Answer on page 155)

The Lighter View consists of short articles, cartoons, quotations, or any other type of humorous material about the editing life. We invite you to make suggestions and contribute material that you find humorous. Send ideas to Barbara Cox, MedEdit Associates, 5429 SW 80 Street, Gainesville FL 32608. Phone (9AM to 4 PM EST), Monday through Friday) 352-376-3071; fax 352-336-8377.

"Just because specialists can read material with a Fog Index of 20 doesn't mean they want to."

—Roy Peter Clark, in The Editorial Eye